

The World Peace Game Master Class: Become a Facilitator!

June 20-24, 2022

East Cooper Montessori Charter School

Using John Hunter's World Peace Game as an inspiring and challenging analogy, Master Class participants observe the Game live with students each morning. Afternoon sessions focus on introducing educators to--

- Guiding philosophy and pedagogical principles that underlie the Game
- Identifying the essential attributes necessary to facilitate the Game through a series of reflective questions and activities
- Designing learning inspired by the principles and spirit of the game

WORKING IDEAS:

- Student Engagement and Ownership of Learning
- Strengths, Challenges, and Possibilities
- Moving from Control to Structure
- Renewal, Reflection, and Reinvention
- Teacher as Designer
- Open Space Curriculum Design

The Master Class is led by WPG Facilitator Kevin Durden. The experience is founded on the ideas shared by master teacher John Hunter in World Peace and Other 4th-Grade Achievements.

About the World Peace Game Master Class:

A World Peace Game Master Class is an unparalleled experience for teachers to come together in an environment insulated from the demanding rhythms and routines of the school day to explore the possibilities of the Game for their own students. Afternoon sessions encourage participants to reflect on their own teaching practices and consider implementing the methods of Game designer John Hunter. The five-day session combines morning observations and afternoon collaborative discussions qualifying attendees for a certificate documenting 40 contact hours of professional development and authorizing educators to use the World Peace Game in their classroom.

Further information can be found at worldpeacegame.org. Please note that Master Class registration is through East Cooper Montessori Charter School and not through the World Peace Game Foundation website, which is solely dedicated to Mr. John Hunter's work.
