

THE WORLD PEACE GAME

July 17-21, 2023
at ARGO NAVIS SCHOOL

The World Peace Game is a hands-on political science simulation. Four countries are arrayed against each other as young players take on the roles of prime ministers, cabinet members, arms dealers, and more. The object? Achieve world peace and global prosperity by challenging students with 24 interlocking, multifaceted crises--hurricanes, oil spills, food shortages, political and economic tensions--while on the brink of armed conflict.

Accept the challenge to save the planet! Young leaders will learn

- negotiation skills
- systems thinking
- creative problem-solving
- critical reasoning
- collaboration
- conflict resolution
- responsible stewardship

and HAVE FUN!

Game play this summer is led by WPG Facilitator Kevin Durden. The experience is founded on the ideas shared by master teacher John Hunter in World Peace and Other 4th-Grade Achievements.

About the World Peace Game:

Refined by master teacher John Hunter over the course of 35 years of classroom practice, this experiential learning geopolitical simulation has the potential to fully engage students' minds as well as hearts. Players step into different leadership positions across different international organizations including four countries, a World Bank, United Nations, World Court, and Arms Dealers. They must sort through chaos, handle failure, look within themselves, and reach out to others to decide what course of action to take. No two games are alike, yet every time, the players' own wisdom, creativity, and compassion emerge and save the planet.

Further information can be found at worldpeacegame.org. Please note that game registration is through Argo Navis School and not through the World Peace Game Foundation website, which is solely dedicated to Mr. John Hunter's work.
